

World cultural heritage made visible

Since 2011, 111 sites of prehistoric lake dwellings in 6 countries around the Alps have been part of the UNESCO World Cultural Heritage: a unique historical archive has been preserved in the lakes. Pile dwellings and everyday objects tell of the life of the early inhabitants of our region.

Since 1922, this sunken world has been made visible through reconstructions in the Lake Dwelling Museum. The special exhibition “The Heritage of the Lake Dwellers - Fascination World Cultural Heritage” shows a selection of over 1000 original finds from the underwater sites.

3000 years of history await you

Welcome to the Lake Dwellings of Unteruhldingen, one of the largest archaeological open-air museums in Europe. Here the early history of our region comes alive:

23 reconstructed houses from the Stone and Bronze Ages (approx. 4000 - 850 BC), replicas and original finds from the excavations make a fascinating sunken world visible again.

There is much to discover on your tour: The early history of the lake, the "Lake Dwellings around the Alps" World Heritage Site, Ötzi and his contemporaries - their everyday life, their technical achievements, their medical knowledge, their Europe-wide connections are explained at information points and by guides. Topics such as climate and environmental changes since the Ice Age are thought-provoking - also for today. And all this in the midst of a fascinating landscape on the edge of the oldest nature reserve on Lake Constance.

During the school holidays, UHldi explains in the Stone Age Trail how the pile dwellers built their houses.
